It can be used for opening websites, programs, documents or even dragging webpages to the browser. This extension has settings that can be configured when installing it from the Chrome Web Store. From here, you can assign keyboard shortcuts to the most frequent tasks such as opening Facebook, Twitter and email accounts, opening various types of documents, bookmarks, desktop shortcuts and setting an alias to a URL. The shortcut you choose will be displayed on the top right side of the browser. Press it and all the selected websites, programs and pages open in the respective tabs. You can even drag the browser to the keyboard, therefore enabling you to access anything else with a single mouse gesture. For those who need more flexibility, the add-on also offers a scroll wheel mode, which gives you the possibility to work with virtually all applications, web pages, documents and even websites. The app also gives you the option to repeat a previous mouse gesture as well as a super speed setting, which enables you to do up to 17 mouse gestures per second. If you want to show webpages from a URL instead of opening them all in tabs, KeyMacro lets you do so. In this mode, all the selected text is set in a textbox and will be opened when you click on the button "Copy". You can also 70238732e0

Acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL) is the most common pediatric cancer and is characterized by a wide spectrum of clinical presentations, response to treatment, and outcome. We performed a detailed review of genetic variation in the pathogenesis of childhood ALL, focusing on studies that have identified germline variants associated with risk or outcomes in childhood ALL. The detailed review was performed in collaboration with a panel of pediatric oncology clinicians, who then reviewed the list of genetic variants to determine if the association with outcome was likely to be clinically meaningful for individual patients. Variants associated with the risk of ALL, risk of relapse or outcome were selected. Data were collected regarding the potential effect of each genetic variant on ALL pathogenesis and the results of the relevant studies. Fifty-two germline variants are associated with ALL risk or outcome. Thirty-one have been identified in pediatric ALL, and the most common are variants in TP53, JAK3, REL, and the HLA-B gene. A common variant in CDKN2A may reduce the risk of relapse and non-relapse mortality. Two common variants in NOTCH1 are associated with a favorable outcome for children with Philadelphia chromosome-positive ALL and an adverse outcome for those with non-Philadelphia chromosome ALL.
