Its main purpose is to configure the context menu of common file types in the Finder. It allows you to create custom menu items and assign hotkeys to open the context menu. KeyMacro for Mac v1.0.1 Description: It is a MacOS X application which allows you to configure the context menu of common file types. The application is a solution to the problem that the menu of file types in the Finder is very limited and not in any way customizable. The application allows you to define which file types the application is aware of and to define context menu items. The item can be customized in terms of the path, where it is to appear, whether it's to be activated or not and where the hotkeys of the application are to be used. If the menu is open, it is also possible to set the hotkeys to bring it to the front. This way it's possible to save some screen space. Because you can create as many items as you want, it's possible to have the menu open all the time. In the alternative, you may activate a single item at a time. This way, only the menu for the currently open Finder window will be shown. You can also lock the menu and enable or disable it at start up. This way the menu can be made accessible during the application's execution. It is also possible to activate the menu in addition to the Finder's menu. This way the menu is displayed on top of the Finder and any other application. It's possible to assign hotkeys to bring the menu to the front. This way it's possible to save screen space. NOTE: When activating the menu, it's necessary to use the English version of the application. Testimonials: "The first thing that I noticed is that it perfectly works in all of the MacOS X applications. The menu items created by the application are really simple to use. The only problem was to find something to fill the space that the menu occupies. Using the menu-bar in all of the Finder windows solved the problem very quickly. I also like the fact that it doesn't show the menu when I activate the Finder. It's a great and nice product." "The application perfectly works on all of the MacOS X applications that I tried. Even better than my expectations, the menu items are very easy to use. I like the fact that the items are shown by hovering the mouse, which I find a really nice solution." "The application 80eaf3aba8 important thing about the application is that it organizes frequently used applications and makes them easily accessible. The application uses a transparent tray icon to display shortcuts, so you can add more than one application to the tray and keep an eye on them all. The Tray Menu icon also has a context menu, where you can remove an application, change the order in which they appear and edit their properties. The application can be set to start at the time of system start up or you can specify the tray menu to start on a certain schedule, such as at night or at system restart. The application is lightweight, it doesn't slow down the PC and it doesn't create a registry entry. The application doesn't change your system settings. It doesn't access the Internet, so it doesn't pose a privacy threat. Please note that the screenshots in the User Manual are of the Lite version, available from the main menu.
